Rallying against back-to-work legislation

More than 100 people surrounded the Sparks Street post office yesterday to protest back-to-work legislation and the current lockout at Canada Post offices across the country. "It takes away our rights as Canadians, as postal workers, and as union members," said Michelle Wroblewski, a letter carrier from Peterborough. For more coverage of the Canada Post dispute, see page 6.

Tory axe to fall on jobs

- Nearly 300 cuts coming this year: Unions
- Federal economists, policy analysts and auditors will be first go

The federal government will cut 687 Public Works and Government Services Canada jobs — many located in Ottawa — over the next three years, unions announced yesterday.

Three major unions were notified Friday the exercise is expected to save about $100 million. Individual workers learned early yesterday afternoon their jobs were on the chopping block. Under collective agreements, the federal government will attempt to make other reasonable job offers, train employees to work in other areas, or offer severance packages for them to leave.

The Canadian Association of Professional Employees (CAPE), which represents some 14,000 members, says 103 federal economists and policy analysts who work in the consulting services branch of Public Works, providing analysis for all federal departments, are to be cut.

Although the department has offered an eight-week transition period in which to help employees find other work, CAPE president Claude Poirier said the cuts are worrisome. It raises concerns about what kind of scrutiny proposed legislation or program cuts will receive in the future, and the Canadian public should be concerned, said Poirier, that "we're going to see more and more decisions made by this government on an ideological basis, instead of on a learned basis."

Poirier predicted much deeper job cuts are to come.

Employees shy on mental-health issues

Canadians fear telling their employers they have a mental-health issue says a new report by the Conference Board of Canada — a finding that comes as no surprise to a local expert on work-life balance.

“(Employees) fear the fact that they’re not going to be seen as team players, they’re going to be seen as whiners, non-performers, and let their team down,” said Linda Duxbury, a professor at Carleton University’s Sprott School of Business.

The report entitled Building Mentally Healthy Workplaces: Perspectives of Canadian Workers and Front-Line Managers, offers a glimpse into Canadians’ work environments after 1,010 Canadian employees were surveyed in January 2011.

The findings revealed 54 per cent of respondents said disclosing a mental health condition to their employer would jeopardize their chances for a promotion, while 38 per cent said it would jeopardize future success.

Duxbury said that in her research on stress and depression, employers generally don’t deal with mental health very effectively in the workplace. She suggested people push back their hours, take time off and turn off their BlackBerry when they go home as ways of coping with work-related stress.

The report comes after the Mental Health Commission of Canada announced Thursday it would launch a nationwide standard to improve mental health in the workplace. ● JOE LOFARO

City aims to attract immigrants

► Ottawa’s prosperity depends on successfully attracting and welcoming skilled immigrants: OLIP

JESSICA SMITH
@METRONEWS.CA

A city-wide strategy was launched yesterday to attract skilled immigrants to Ottawa and help them successfully settle here — something other major Canadian cities have already had for some time.

“Vancouver, Edmonton, Calgary, Saskatoon, Winnipeg, Halifax — they all have local immigration strategies and they’ve had them for years,” said Dick Stewart, chair of Ottawa Local Immigration Partnership (OLIP). “So we clearly needed to get in on the game.”

The Ottawa Local Immigration Partnership brings together groups that offer services for immigrants — small non-profits, school boards, universities and colleges, health and social-service agencies, the city and local businesses.

“Immigrants need help when they arrive. If you serve them 10 years later, then all the damage is done.”

HAWA MOHAMED, A CO-ORDINATOR FOR THE CANADIAN SOMALI MOTHERS ASSOCIATION

The idea is that the organizations’ services will be more accessible if they work toward common goals.

There are about 45 local immigration partnerships (LIPs) in Ontario — the product of work by the federal and provincial governments and the Association of Municipalities of Ontario in 2006.

Hawa Mohamed, a co-ordinator for the Canadian Somali Mothers Association, said OLIP will help prevent Ottawa’s skilled immigrants from “slipping through the

Cops retrieve teen’s body

The OPP have retrieved the body of a 15-year-old Ottawa boy who drowned in Charlestown Lake, west of Brockville.

Police were called to a spot where three boys were swimming and jumping off a cliff into the water.

Rae said the force’s marine unit and fire department were out searching for the missing youth Sunday but that it wasn’t until just before 1 p.m. yesterday that the OPP’s

Case not a threat to sports: Mayor

- Friends of Lansdowne court challenge begins today
- Sports franchises plans go ahead if city loses case: Mayor

JESSICA SMITH
@METRONEWS.CA

The Friends of Lansdowne are beginning their case in Ontario Superior Court this afternoon, but even if they win it won't threaten plans to bring high-level sports teams and events to Lansdowne Park, said Mayor Jim Watson yesterday.

"There's always going to be a stadium there," said Watson. "It just has to be refurbished because its in pretty rough shape. We wouldn't have gone and bid on FIFA World Cup women's soccer if we didn't have confidence that we would have a facility to host it."

If the city loses the case, "we're going to have to come back with another plan because to keep Lansdowne in its dilapidated state is just not an option," said Watson.

Whatever the outcome, sports will be a part of Lansdowne, he said.

"It's always had a history of being a gathering spot for sports, whether that's the original Ottawa Senators that played there in the past, the Roughriders, the 67s or the Glebe little league baseball," he said.

Friends of Lansdowne member Michael Tiger said he believes if his side wins the city will have to "wait a little bit longer" for NASL soccer and a CFL team, because the future of Lansdowne Park would be "up in air."

The group is fighting the Lansdowne Partnership Plan the city signed with the Ottawa Sports and Entertainment Group last June to build a commercial and residential development with a stadium in Lansdowne Park.

"The city has acted in a manner which is, as the lawyers call it, 'illegal,'" said Tiger.

"We would think that the city would have to go back to square one," said Tiger. That doesn't mean the Friends of Lansdowne group objects to there being sporting events at Lansdowne Park, he added.

"Some of the people involved in this are actually sports fans too," Tiger said.

► The Golden Seals soccer team warms up before a game at Lansdowne Park's Frank Clair Stadium yesterday evening. Among the elements of the disputed Lansdowne Park redevelopment is a new stadium.

Ottawa lands its own professional soccer team

Ottawa is getting its own pro soccer team in the North American Soccer League (NASL) and — depending on the outcome of a court challenge to the city's redevelopment plans for Lansdowne Park — soccer fans will be able to cheer it on in a new 24,000 seat stadium built to FIFA specifications.

David Downs, the league commissioner made the official announcement yesterday at Lansdowne Park with partners from the Ottawa Sports and Entertainment Group (OSEG), which owns the new team. OSEG has also been granted a conditional CFL football team franchise.

"There's nothing quite like the shared experience of going to the stadium to cheer on the home team in a great soccer atmosphere," said Downs.

As Ottawa's home stadium, Lansdowne Park will host league matches with member teams from such cities as Atlanta, Tampa Bay and Puerto Rico.

"This will be, by far, the highest calibre of soccer we'll have seen in Ottawa since 2007 FIFA Men's U-20 World Cup," said John Pugh, the team's new president, and also the owner of the already established Ottawa Fury soccer club.

Pugh, the driving force behind yesterday's announcement, said during the tournament Frank Clair Stadium was filled to the rafters with fans watching soccer stars from Argentina and Brazil.

Mayor Jim Watson called the announcement a "big win" for the city and said he is excited to see the revitalization of Lansdowne begin.

The mayor added shovels could go into the ground for the new stadium as early as late 2011.

Resident survives inferno

Firefighters feared the worst when called to a fire that destroyed a house in Ottawa's far west end, but later found the homeowner outside safe and sound.

The sole occupant of 304 Sprucridge Rd. was unaccounted for when firefighters first arrived, so a rapid search was conducted on the first floor. When firefighters attempted to reach the second floor, they were pushed back by heavy fire and extreme heat.

The owner, who lived alone in the home was found shortly after on the property grounds, uninjured.

The fire caused $650,000 worth of damage.

While the house was razed, fire crews prevented the fire from spreading to a nearby forest and a neighbouring home.

Victims assistance was called in to look after the needs of the owner. The office of the fire marshal is investigating. ● METRO

Open borders, UN refugee chief urges countries

The UN refugee chief yesterday urged all countries to keep their borders open and offer protection to refugees fleeing violence.

UN High Commissioner for Refugees Antonio Guterres spoke on World Refugee Day after some European nations, including Italy, have shown resistance to opening their doors to people fleeing unrest and violence across North Africa and the Middle East.

Guterres spoke of an "impression" in Europe that all refugees were coming to the continent. But, he said, "it's simply not true that refugees are moving massively to the North."

A report released yesterday by UNHCR said four-fifths of the world's 15.4 million refugees are hosted by developing countries.

In Libya, for example, about 1 million people — not all of them refugees have fled to neighbouring Tunisia and Egypt since the beginning of the violence, Guterres told reporters in Rome. Less than 2 per cent of that number have crossed the Mediterranean to reach Europe.

Tories table bill to end postal dispute

The Conservative government brandished the sword of back-to-work legislation for the second time in a week yesterday, this time to force an end to the Canada Post lockout.

If the two sides can't agree to their own deal by the time the bill passes, it will be up to an arbitrator to decide which side has the better offer.

But while the end of the postal lockout may be welcome news for those eager to see mail services resume, critics are alarmed at what appears to be a major change in labour relations policy for Canada. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Girl forced to wear bomb vest: Police

► Pakistani authorities say suicide-bomb vest contained nearly nine kilograms of explosives

Police said yesterday that militants kidnapped a nine-year-old girl on her way to school and forced her to wear a suicide-bomb vest. The girl and police said she managed to escape her captors as they directed her to attack a paramilitary checkpoint in northwest Pakistan.

Sohana Jawed, who is in Grade 3, said she was abducted near her home in the northwestern city of Peshawar on Saturday and taken to Lower Dir district, a four hours' drive away.

Police in Lower Dir presented Jawed at a news conference, where she told her story dressed in her blue and white school uniform. But police in Peshawar said they haven't received a complaint of a missing girl and haven't identified a resident with her name.

N.Y. stalls on gay marriage

► Same-sex couples can legally marry in Connecticut, Iowa, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont and Washington, D.C.

Hundreds of protesters for and against gay marriage in New York chanted, sang and sought out TV cameras yesterday while the state senate again came to no resolution on the issue in a closed-door session that barely touched on the nationally divisive topic.

New York's vote is seen as pivotal in the national question over same-sex marriage, an effort that largely stalled in the same room two years ago when the senate voted it down. Since then, efforts have failed in New Jersey, Rhode Island and Maryland. Advocates hope a "yes" vote in the country's third-most populous state jump-starts the effort.

Two Republican senators said the gay marriage issue that has sharply focused the efforts of opponents and advocates was only briefly discussed in yesterday's meeting. Instead, senate Republican leader Dean Skelos is negotiating with Democratic Gov. Andrew Cuomo on religious exemptions that could be enough for Republican senators — most of whom oppose gay marriage — to send the issue to the floor, where a bipartisan effort could pass it.

The state legislature's other chamber, the assembly, has already passed the measure. The legislative session was supposed to end yesterday, but the negotiations are expected to keep lawmakers in the state capital, Albany, through much of the week.

HEAT CAN PLAY HAVOC WITH STYLE

SHE SAYS ...

JESSICA NAPIER
METRO

There is nothing as short and sweet as a Canadian summer. For three, maybe four, months of the year we come out of hibernation, blissfully shedding our layers of fur, fleece and goose down and remember what it's like to feel the warmth of real sunlight against our skin. However, while it's nearly impossible to dress to impress in minus-30 temperatures, looking good in the sweltering heat can be just as difficult.

As the humidex increases, the combination of greasy sunscreen and perspiration causes my carefully applied makeup to melt off my face by midday. While strolling through the city, the soles of my sandal-clad feet become caked in layers of dirt and grime. My penchant for white sundresses means I typically end up with a very obvious Jackson Pollock-esque collection of coffee, ice cream and ketchup stains all over myself.

"My penchant for white sundresses means I typically end up with a very obvious Jackson Pollock-esque collection of coffee, ice cream and ketchup stains all over myself."

swimwear during the summer months — regardless of whether or not the venue necessitates waterproof apparel. For certain misguided individuals a bikini top becomes a perfectly acceptable substitute for a bra, or even a shirt.

Exhibitionists aside, most of us — no matter what size, sex or age — really hate putting on a bathing suit.

Somehow, I always manage to convince myself that I will feel much better about being nearly nude when poolside if I just buy myself a new bather. However, about 10 minutes into the experience I inevitably remember that stripping down in a badly lit fitting room to try on a two-piece is a horribly mortifying way to spend an afternoon. If you absolutely must go bathing-suit shopping this season, I recommend doing it online or immediately following a bout of stomach flu.

But I'll quit my whining now. Because even though ill-fitting swimsuits, frizzy hair and sweaty skin have me feeling like a hot mess this summer, I know it will be over far too soon.

Is losing the Stanley Cup a valid reason to riot?

Worth mentioning

WASHINGTON. Sea levels have been rising significantly over the past century of global warming, according to a study that offers the most detailed look yet at the changes in ocean levels during the last 2,100 years.

Researchers found that since the late 19th century — as the world became industrialized — the sea level has risen more than two millimetres per year, on average. That is a little less than one-tenth of an inch, but it adds up over time.

It will lead to land loss, more flooding and saltwater invading bodies of fresh water, said lead researcher Benjamin Horton, whose team examined sediment from the state of North Carolina's Outer Banks. He directs the Sea Level Research Laboratory at the University of Pennsylvania.

The predicted effects he cites are not new and are predicted by many climate scientists. But outside experts say the research verifies increasing sea-level rise compared to previous centuries. Horton said rising temperatures are the reason behind the higher sea level.

So long, dot-com era: the world of website names is about to undergo a revolution, with anyone allowed to choose whatever suffix they want for their website, including ideograms and Arabic characters.

Women of Wal-Mart blocked

- ▶ Justices agree lawsuit could not proceed as class action in current form
- ▶ Lawyers for plaintiffs say they're considering filing thousands of claims

The U.S. Supreme Court yesterday blocked a massive sex discrimination lawsuit against Wal-Mart on behalf of female employees in a decision that makes it harder to mount large-scale bias claims against the biggest U.S. companies.

The ruling reverses a decision by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco. By a 5-4 vote along ideological lines, the court said there were too many women in too many jobs at Wal-Mart to wrap into one lawsuit.

The lawsuit could have involved up to 1.6 million women, with Wal-Mart facing potentially billions of dollars in damages.

Now, the handful of women who brought the case may pursue their claims on their own, with much less money at stake and less pressure on Wal-Mart to settle.

One of the women involved in the suit, Christine Kwapnoski, said she was disappointed in the ruling, but vowed to push ahead with her claims.

"All I have to say is when I go back to work tomorrow, I'm going to let them know we are still fighting," said Kwapnoski.

The lawsuit said that women are grossly under-represented among managers, holding just 14 per cent of store manager positions compared with more than 80 per cent of lower-ranking supervisory jobs that are paid by the hour. Wal-Mart responded that women in its retail stores made up two-thirds of all employees and two-thirds of all managers in 2001.

Rapper 50 Cent's newest work of fiction will have an anti-bullying message.

The Penguin Young Reader Group has signed up 50 Cent's novel Playground. The publisher announced Monday that the book is a semi-autobiographical young adult novel about bullying that will come out in January 2012. The 34-year-old rapper, whose real name is Curtis Jackson, has acknowledged a violent childhood and dealing drugs at an early age.

He's also released a memoir, From Pieces to Weight, and a self-help guide co-authored by Robert Greene called The 50th Law.

► So what exactly does the Harry Potter author have up her sleeves? ► We don't know (even Daniel Radcliffe has no clue) but we sure had fun taking a guess

New Line of Fragrances

How likely it is to happen: 1/5

There is already a Harry Potter perfume out there but it surely does not hurt to smell like the many other characters in that magical universe. Professor Umbridge does seem awfully nice-smelling on screen, no?

A musical? A TV series?

How likely it is to happen: 2/5

It's a natural progression for books these days. If a film is done, let's head to Broadway! Or sell the rights to broadcasting companies and have their studios produce a full season of TV episodes. It's an old-trick but it certainly keeps the fans happy and the profits-margin sky high.

A Smartphone?

How likely it is to happen: 4/5

The online community is buzzing with excitement that a new Potter-product could be released next — and this time, a Smartphone. We love phones and the smarter the phones are, the happier we will be. However, unless this Potter Smartphone acts like the Elder Wand and we are able to cast actual spells with it, we are not too excited about it. (But if the screen lights up when we say "Lumos," we may just reconsider making a purchase.)

POTTERMORE?

NICHOLAS LIM
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

J.K. Rowling has launched a new website, Pottermore.com, but sadly and mysteriously, it holds little more than a pair of tree-perched owls and an enticing Coming Soon banner.

Clicking on the owls will bring you to a YouTube page that shows a timer, counting down to the day of an announcement, which is slated to happen June 23 at 12 p.m. British Summer Time.

No one in the world (well, except Rowling and her little team of cloak-wearing colleagues) knows what is hitting the Muggle world.

We can only speculate — and speculate we will!

GETTY IMAGES

This owl and the one you see at the bottom left greet you at the Pottermore page.

An Entirely New Book?

How likely it is to happen: 3/5

Rowling did say (many, many times) that there would not be a sequel to the Harry Potter series. However, she did not say that spin-offs and prequels and crossover novels are out of the question.

Harry Potter and the 8th Book

How likely it is to happen:

It is more possible that an owl will deliver your acceptance letter to Hogwarts tomorrow than hearing Rowling announcing an eighth book in the series. She is very particular about numbers and magic, and given how seven horcruxes come together in seven books so beautifully, it is very unlikely that Rowling will destroy her own masterpiece by adding an eighth book.

Harry's story ended on a perfect note, and unless Rowling has an even more perfect way to extend the story, we are betting that The Deathly Hallows is the last book. Yes, we are sad too but we have to move on, and the final film is waiting for us next month.

At least that is definitely going to happen.

GREENER LIVING

ZEROING IN ON ZERO WASTE

Did you know that when you look at North America from space, the highest point of land on the eastern seaboard is a landfill site? Now more than ever, we need to reduce, reuse and recycle.

What do you put in your garbage? Some people throw out old clothes when they can be recycled or even torn up and used as rags. A lot of food and beverage containers end up in the garbage when all you have to do is clean them out and put them into the blue box. And, of course, paper documents belong in the recycling bin too. Then there's packaging — Canadians throw away about half a kilogram of packaging each and every day, says Gill Deacon, author of Green for Life and more recently There's Lead in Your Lipstick (both Penguin Books).

Deacon and other waste experts point to the zero waste philosophy as a way to live your life — and make positive environmental changes.

"Zero waste is a philosophy and a goal to work towards," says Craig Bartlett, Manager, Waste Operations for the Region of Durham in Ontario. "Because everyone would like to see the end of garbage as we know it."

The zero waste philosophy encourages the redesign of products and resources so that all products can re-used in some way — and the amount of garbage sent to landfill minimized. It also puts the onus on everyone to reduce the amount of waste they generate.

At the same time, Jed Goldberg, president, Earth Day Canada, says it's important to remember that waste is not just something you throw into the blue box or garbage. "It's actually a measure of inefficiency. Waste is anything that's used that doesn't need to be used. It could be fuel in your car."

What we really have to do, he says, is change our attitudes about waste and even its description. "It's not garbage, it's not recycling; it's using resources that don't need to be used."

THE BIG PICTURE

ARLESTOCK.COM/THINKSTOCK

A SHIFT IN THINKING HAS MADE WASTE REDUCTION A NEW WAY TO DO BUSINESS

“Zero waste has positioned people to think of recycling as a business opportunity,” says Rob Cook, Chief Executive Officer, at the Ontario Waste Management Association, a non-profit organization that represents private-sector service providers.

“Over the last 10 to 15 years, we’ve recognized that landfill may not be the best way to deal with all materials,” he says. “And people now look on at resource recovery as economically beneficial.”

In the past, products were cradle-to-grave — you bought a product, used it and it ended up in the garbage.

“Now when we talk about packaging and other materials, a good cradle-to-cradle lifespan is the goal,” says Bartlett — and that means the product isn’t thrown out but recycled in some way into something else.

Items once thought as garbage are now used in other ways. For example, there’s little scrap metal that ends up in landfill because metal is so valuable. There are technologies that can turn plastic water bottles into high value fabric or into biofuels. There are also programs to recycle toilets and sinks, and possibly shingles.

Landfill is always the last option after reduce, reuse, recycle.

WHAT IS EXTENDED PRODUCER RESPONSIBILITY?

Environment Canada explains that as a policy approach, it’s when a producer’s responsibility for a product is extended to the post-consumer stage of the product’s life cycle. What that means is producers are increasingly looking at ways to incorporate environmental considerations in the design of their products.

ENVIRONMENTAL SEATING PLAN

Green Chair Events, Vancouver, is sitting pretty. The company plans and creates affordable and sustainable events, and it was recently recognized by Earth Day Canada with a 2011 Hometown Heroes Small Business award.

“We are the missing link in reducing waste between governments and organizers at events who put on things,” explains company spokesperson Liliana Segal. “Our goal is to make sure all garbage and waste goes to the right place and gets reduced, reused and recycled.”

To reduce waste in the workplace, Green Chair Events suggests that businesses renegotiate flat rate garbage disposal fees so that billing is done by the amount of garbage generated.

STUDENTS GET TOP MARKS IN RECYCLING EFFORTS

Last fall students from 70 schools in six provinces participated in the Recycle My Cell Challenge and collected almost 4,000 wireless devices as well as close to 200 kilograms of batteries and other wireless accessories. Way to go!

SUGARCANE ETHANOL FROM BRAZIL

Coca-Cola Canada uses sugarcane ethanol feedstocks in Brazil for its PlantBottle packaging. The sugarcane is considered an advanced renewable fuel by the Environmental Protection Agency and is the only first generation biofuel widely recognized around the world for its unique environmental and social performance.

THINGS GO BETTER WITH — PLANTS!

Thirsty for something good? Coca-Cola Canada is now using plant-based materials in its new Dasani water bottle.

The company created its innovative PlantBottle™ packaging through a process that turns sugarcane into a key component of PET plastic. And, it is entirely recyclable in existing systems.

The Dasani PlantBottle is made from up to 30 per cent plant-based materials. The Company’s long-term goal is to reach a 100 per cent plant-based package for all of its products.

“It’s our goal to make traditional plastic bottles a thing of the past and ensure that every beverage we produce is available in 100 per cent plant-based, fully recyclable packaging,” says Scott Vitters, general manager, PlantBottle Packaging Platform, The Coca-Cola Company.

The PlantBottle also helps the company reduce its carbon footprint, says Vitters. Traditional PET bottles are made from petroleum and other nonrenewable fossil fuels. But incorporating a blend of petroleum-based materials with up to 30 per cent plant-based materials means Dasani packaging reduces potential intrinsic carbon dioxide emissions when compared with PET plastic bottles.

REDUCE YOUR WASTE: IT'S EASIER THAN YOU THINK

MICHALAK STRESSES THAT ONE PERSON CAN DO A LOT TO ENCOUR- AGE CHANGE AND MAKE A DIFFERENCE

Five years ago, Rene Michalak, co-ordinator of Rethink Red Deer, a local citizen action group, started Garbage Free February as a personal challenge. The goal was to make choices that would not produce garbage and contribute to landfill, and he blogged about his experience online. Several friends took the challenge with him the next year. In year three, a dozen or so people, as well as a few businesses, took part. "Now I can't keep track anymore," says Michalak, who is also Network Manager for the Alberta Environmental Network in Red Deer, Alta. Garbage-Free February has become a community success story, and this year it may partner with the Recycling Council of Alberta.

Michalak stresses that one person can do a lot to encourage change and make a difference. Of course, one way to do that is to start thinking about what you throw out — can you divert it in some way?

Here is a checklist of other ways to reduce waste.

- Purchase recyclable and reusable goods only.
- When you see over-packaged items in retail stores, complain. That's what Jed Goldberg of Earth Day Canada did when he saw a plastic-wrapped coconut — and the store stopped doing it.
- Don't buy over packaged products — or leave the extra packaging with the retailer.
- When there's an option, always choose the product with less packaging (for example, a roll of stamps, not the large, flat package).
- Buy in bulk.
- Buy second-hand. Check websites such as Craigslist and Kijiji, and stores such as Value Village.
- Think about all the products you buy — how they are made and how you will dispose of them.
- Bring your own carry bags when you are shopping.
- Be a good role model — always practice and share positive environmental habits.
- Use re-useable coffee mugs — bring them to your favourite coffee store and the office. Avoid Styrofoam completely.
- Compost organic waste. Use the municipal green bin program if available or compost in your yard.

RESULTS

YOUR WASTE REDUCTION PERSONALITY

UNDER 10 POINTS:

Shame on you. It's time to join the war on waste... and it's really not difficult to make a difference. Reduce, reuse and recycle.

OVER 10 POINTS:

You're on the right track but could be more pro-active in helping to make the world a better place – by creating less waste and protecting natural resources.

OVER 20 POINTS:

You are an Eco Warrior leading yourself and your family and friends, no doubt, in the war on waste! Pat yourself on the back — and keep doing what you're doing!

TRIM YOUR WASTE

Rethinking your relationship with waste is one of the most powerful ways you can help stop climate change. Canadians produced an average of 837 kilograms of non-hazardous solid waste in 2006, all of which goes straight into a landfill. Landfills produce about one quarter of Canada's methane emissions — and methane is a greenhouse gas more powerful than carbon dioxide.

Here's what you can do:

REDUCE FOOD WASTE

Throwing away food is a waste of money, time and energy. Learn how to keep your fruits and veggies fresh and edible for as long as possible

RECYCLE

Making sure to take our paper, plastic, and bottles and cans to the blue box recycling bins makes a huge difference on how much waste ends up in landfills. Unsure of what can be recycled? Read about the recycling resources in your city for more info.

COMPOST

Your garbage is about 40 per cent organic waste — composting can help divert that matter from producing dangerous greenhouse gases. You don't need a yard to compost — learn how to turn your kitchen "waste" into black gold!

BE A SMART CONSUMER

Companies still produce goods that have a limited lifespan so that the consumer cycle can continue. By choosing not to buy products that are over-packaged or "disposable," you are encouraging producers to be more responsible.

Wake-up call for Amy Winehouse

► Singer barely makes through first concert of her comeback tour ► Paid a visit to rehab in the U.K. recently ► Doctors now 'coming down hard on her'

Amy Winehouse's planned comeback tour ended abruptly on the first night after the troubled singer slouched through a Belgrade concert, dropping her microphone at times and letting a backup singer finish songs for her, according to the BBC.

The next two stops on the tour, in Istanbul and Athens, have been scrapped because "she cannot perform to the best of her ability" and feels "this is the right thing to do," her rep says.

Doctors back in the U.K., where Winehouse recently paid a quick visit to rehab, are warning the singer that she has to finally clean up her act.

"It's the last chance saloon for Amy," a source says, according to Popeater. "Doctors have come down hard on her because of the severity of her situation. It's a harsh reality, but she had to hear it." ● METRO ► Winehouse has cancelled the next two stops on her tour.

► "I actually feel the happiest I've felt in a long, long time," says Cole.

Cheryl says she's just fine

Cheryl Cole insists that she's doing fine after being dropped from the U.S. edition of X Factor and she doesn't want people feeling sorry for her, according to the Mirror.

"I'm under no pressure and I actually feel the happiest I've felt in a long, long time," Cole says, according to the newspaper. "I've got a big place, I have enough money — and if I never get photographed again, I don't care."

Cole, who has had to deal with both losing her job and dissolution of her marriage to soccer star Ashley Cole this year, is looking forward to taking a vacation, something she claims she's never done before. ● METRO

Lady Gaga 'totally back together' with her man

Just a month after announcing they'd broken up, Lady Gaga is reportedly back with on-again, off-again boyfriend Luc Carl, according to Us Weekly.

"They had a little fight. I think the breakup lasted a week or two," a source says.

"They are totally back together now." Gaga herself admits she may have stretched the truth in announcing her relationship's demise. "I sometimes skirt questions about it — and maybe not honestly," she tells the magazine. ● METRO

Cutting the belly fat

► New research shows the science behind why carbs can cause belly fat ► Researchers say that findings are important because abdominal fat is known to increase diabetes and strokes

CELIA MILNE
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

Statistics

According to Statistics Canada, 24.3 per cent of Canadian men — and 23.9 per cent of women — are obese.

- Americans That's better than in the United States, where fully one-third of Americans have weight problems.
- Getting worse The problem is accelerating, as Canadian numbers have jumped 10 percentage points across the board in the past 20 years.

How do you get rid of that deep belly fat? Reduce carbs such as white rice, white bread and potatoes.

Visceral fat isn't what we think of as blubber. It's a very tenacious fat that lurks deep within our bodies, surrounding our vital organs, and it's really tough to get rid of. Too much visceral fat is known to increase your risk of developing type 2 diabetes, stroke and coronary artery disease. Even skinny people sometimes have excess visceral fat.

Researchers in the nutrition department of the University of Alabama did an experiment in which they put 69 healthy overweight men and women on one of two diets for 16 weeks.

People received either a reduced carb diet (43 per cent carbs, 18 per cent protein, 39 per cent fat) or a standard diet (55 per cent carbs, 18 per cent protein, and 27 per cent fat).

After eight weeks, the lower carb diet reduced insulin production in the body, thus resulting in loss of visceral fat. This occurred even though calorie intake was set for weight maintenance.

"This research is newsworthy because abdominal fat is known to increase risk of developing diseases such as type 2 diabetes, stroke, and coronary artery disease," says Barbara Gower, a professor in the department of nutrition sciences at University of Alabama. Decreasing carbs is a good way to reduce your risk of developing these chronic diseases without taking medication, she adds.

For the second eight weeks of the study, calorie intake was set for both groups to lose weight.

The lower carb group lost more total body fat than the standard diet group.

The study was presented recently to the Endocrine Society in Boston.

► No carbs? No kidding.

Carb intake

Besides reducing your carb intake, another way to reduce visceral belly fat is to exercise. Researchers at Duke University Medical Center say the more exercise you do, the better.

Yoga pose. Cat Pose/Marjariasana

What you do:

- 1 Start on your hands and knees in a tabletop position. Make sure your knees are placed directly below your hips and your wrists, elbows and shoulders are in line and perpendicular to the floor. Become aware of the length and quality of the breath. Centre your head in the neutral position, eyes looking at the floor.
- 2 As you exhale, round your spine towards the ceiling, making sure to keep your shoulders and knees in position. Feel the tailbone and the crown of the head lifting equally towards the sky. Press into the palms to drop the shoulders away from the ears and to reach the middle and upper back towards the ceiling. Release your head towards the floor but don't force your chin to your chest.
- 3 Inhale, coming back to neutral tabletop position on your hands and knees.
- 4 If you have difficulty rounding the very top of the upper back ask a friend to lay a hand just above and between the shoulder blades to help you activate the area.
- 5 This pose is often paired with the cow pose on the inhale for a gentle, flowing vinyasa.

BODY FOCUS: PIPPA'S TONED BUM

MARK ANTHONY
EXPERT

Sure, Kate looked great, but it's Pippa's toned derrière we'd love to flaunt on the beach this summer. We asked Pilates expert Mark Anthony how.

Start with: Pre exhaust movements to fire up weak butt muscles

Standing leg lifts: from a standing position keep the right side leg slightly bent with the left leg straight and slightly off the floor. Raise this leg high enough so that you feel contraction in your hip and glute. Pause briefly at the top and return to the start position. Once you have done 15 reps, pause, and with the same leg turn the foot slightly outwards and swing the leg behind you again high enough so that you feel a contraction in your glute. Perform this 15 times and then repeat the exercise with the other leg.

Go into: Wide stance squats and lunges

Squats tone, perk and lift the bum as they trigger the glutes, inner, front and back of the thigh.

Take a wide stance, with your toes turned out to 10 o'clock and 11 o'clock and tilt your pelvis backwards and drop down so that your legs are parallel to the floor and so that your back is straight. Immediately push up to the start position. Do two lots of 15 repetitions each.

Lunges are fundamental for developing strong glutes and lifting the bum. From a standing position step forward into a lunge so that your rear knee is nearly touching the floor. Keep your abs in tight and back up straight. Move back to the start position and alternate the leg. Do two lots of 15 reps.

Make sure you rest in between sessions, as your muscle fibres need to heal and recuperate before they can get stronger.

Eat: the right fuels

You must feed your body right if you want your body to respond to the workout. Think of it as putting fuel in a Ferrari. Drink two litres of water a day and eat small regular meals, three main meals and two snacks. Eliminate salt, sugar, fat (saturated fats, processed foods, high fat creams), alcohol and simple carbohydrates such as white rice, white pasta and white bread. Load up on complex carbs such as brown rice and pasta. Start the day right with a breakfast of two poached eggs or rye bread with baked beans.

Peel off: the orange peel

Cellulite is the build up of fat deposits under the skin. Pick exercises that burn body fat fast such as weight training. Cellulite busting foods include barley, broccoli, spinach and spirulina.

"How you build up muscle is key. You don't want to look massive and masculine. Switch exercises every 10 days as muscles, especially the smaller ones, have good memory and need to be continually challenged and stimulated."

On staying connected:

"For long term results, make exercise a priority. Not caring about your body will mess up the way you look later in life. One hour, minimum 30 minutes, six days a week is all you need to stay connected with your body and get results."

On avoiding injuries:

"Using the body in the same way over and over again can lead to injury or joint problems. With dance aerobics, you are still pounding but are constantly shifting your body and transferring the weight meaning the joints wear out less."

On feeling more powerful:

"Lifestyle is an exhausting word, but identify who you are and make exercise a part of that 'you'. One study showed women spend 80 per cent of their day thinking about negative body issues over lunch, getting dressed, and reading magazines... Reverse this critical train of thought and you'll feel more powerful."

► This could be you.

How to butt out

► Unleash the unstoppable you ► Look at the areas smoking affects you ► Then break that habit for good

Health

You know cigarettes give you cancer. But did you know how fast?

"Smoking causes damage at a genetic level within minutes, not years," says Sara Austin, Self magazine's health features director. "A recent study found that a DNA-harming, carcinogenic by-product spikes in smokers' blood just 15 to 30 minutes after inhaling."

Even scarier, smoking accounts for 30 per cent of all cancer deaths, in addition to causing heart disease, stroke, brain aneurysms and lung problems.

On a daily basis, it's no fun either.

"Smoking is like having a permanent hangover," says John Dicey, an ex smoker who puffed for 20 years, at a rate of sometimes 80 cigarettes a day.

Sex

The health benefits of quitting — increased energy, stamina and quicker recovery time — apply to the bedroom as well.

"Smokers are more likely to snore regularly. You can't enjoy sex if you've been exiled to the spare bedroom," says Austin, who also advises that if you're trying to have a baby, both of you should try to quit. "Women who smoke have a higher risk for infertility, miscarriage, premature birth and babies born too small."

Career

"On average, smokers cost their employers $3,500 more a year due to absence through illness, loss of productivity via illicit smoking breaks and higher rates of incidents at work," says Dicey. Smokers are under the illusion that cigs help them concentrate. The truth is they often can't concentrate because of it.

Finance

"The average smoker blows $1,360 on cigarettes every year," says Austin. Plus, the resale value of your car drops nine per cent due to the stinky interior.

"Chalk up another $490 for a single teeth-whitening session to hide your nicotine stains," she says.

OK, OK we quit!

CHANGE IS THE ONE CONSTANT...
EVEN FOR YOUR TEETH!

Life never stays the same! In fact, we are all familiar with the concept that the only constant in life is change. That truism is applicable to your dental needs as well, perhaps even more for women than men.

The fact is that dental needs for women change dramatically at different times in life. It probably would not come as much of a surprise to learn that these changes correspond with the biological changes women experience along the way.

For instance, when a young woman enters puberty, her body undergoes dramatic hormonal changes. Some women notice that this can affect the health of their gums. There can be a tendency for their gums to become more inflamed and prone to bleeding.

The concern at this stage is that inflamed gums are more likely to be penetrated by the bacteria that are always found in the mouth. This can increase the risk of developing periodontal disease. If the bacteria enters into the bloodstream, it may cause or aggravate more serious health conditions, such as infections, heart conditions, diabetes or even oral cancer.

The good news is that puberty does pass! However, young adult women are not out of the woods. If you are using birth control to reduce the risk of pregnancy, you should be aware that inflammation of the gums is also a side effect of some forms of birth control.

For women who are pregnant, the hormonal changes can again inflame the gums, leaving you susceptible to periodontal disease and bacterial infections. However, it is not just your own health that could be at risk now. The health of your developing baby can also be compromised.

Woman who are in poor oral health during pregnancy are more likely to experience a premature delivery. Babies born prematurely have significant more health challenges, some of which could affect them for their whole lives!

Then when you think you have survived all the tough stuff and the golden years of retirement are just around the corner, along comes menopause! Many post-menopausal women suffer from decreased bone density. This can increase the risk of tooth loss as well as broken or chipped teeth.

Despite all of this, the good news is that most of the negative effects can be offset by a good oral health care regime. That means regular brushing and flossing, as well as visiting your dentist at least twice per year. Your dentist may recommend more frequent visits if your oral health care needs require it.

If you notice that your gums or your daughter's gums remain inflamed for prolonged periods, schedule an appointment with your dentist to discuss this fact. You do not need your dentist to tell you that hormonal changes can play havoc with a woman's body. Making sure you look after your oral health during these challenging times is a healthy habit...and healthy habits lead to healthy lives.

Usually I enjoy a greasy burger, but this one was satisfying in its freshness.

SHE NEEDS HER OWN FRIENDS

TWO SISTERS

ANDREA & CLAIRE
RELATIONSHIPS@METRONEWS.CA

My girlfriend and I have been dating for over a year now, and generally things are great, but I'm noticing she doesn't hang out with her friends anymore. How can I show her having her own friends is healthy and get her out of my hair?
Strangled.

Claire: Dear BF/BFF, You're not alone. Your girlfriend sounds like the type that likes to cocoon in bliss with you and forget about the rest of the world. By providing a group to hang out with, you've fulfilled her need to socialize. This isn't OK, unless you two are in a cult where sympathizing with outsiders warrants a good whipping. Make sure you're clear about how you're uncomfortable her nesting is making you, and that you don't find it attractive. As you're the centre of her world, this will probably get her butt off the bed and out into the world. If she's forgotten how to pick up chicks, suggest a class or an activity that she'd enjoy where she's likely to meet new people...like a hot, rich doctor who regularly volunteers at an orphanage. Oops, scratch that.

Andrea: Dear Strangled, The most important thing I ever learned about relationships was that you can't change people, and I suspect that telling her to get a life might hurt her more than it helps your relationship. So I'd recommend that you change your habits for a few weeks: be more independent, and spend more time alone with the guys. Remind her how much fun it is to miss each other, and tell her you can't wait to hear her stories after a night with the girls. But be careful what you wish for though — she may just have more fun going out with the girls than she does with you!

TWO SISTERS, 20-SOMETHING ANDREA AND 30-SOMETHING CLAIRE, OFFER THEIR DIFFERING VIEWS ON YOUR RELATIONSHIP ISSUES.

Handy cellphone do's and don'ts

In this era, almost everyone in your social circle has a cell phone.

Here at Metro, we shall show you how to behave like a refined, cultured and well-mannered individual in the real world while still staying connected to the virtual world you're addicted to:

At the restaurant (on a first date)

Sorry ladies and gentlemen, if you are on a first date, that cell phone of yours must cease to exist. Turn it off.

At the restaurant (with a group of friends)

Unless your group is heading to the Queen's palace where you must sit straight and always wear a smile, it is generally acceptable to have your phone out when dining with your friends at any other restaurants.

In a board meeting

Unless you have well-trained hand-eye coordination, we suggest that you focus in the meeting. Sure, it may last for three hours, but that just means that your company is in a little crisis and your attention should really be on saving your company and not whining about your job on Twitter.

FUN AND FRUGAL

LESLEY SCORGIE
MONEY@METRONEWS.CA

With skyrocketing fuel prices and the expensive hassles associated with modern day travel, many Canadians are opting to stay close to home this summer rather than vacationing to Europe.

Forgo the stress and inconveniences of long security lines, lost luggage and expensive tickets; and enjoy your vacation time close to home. So long as you stay within a reasonable budget, staycations can save you thousands of dollars each year!

The key to relaxing is to avoid connecting with your workplace. Leave file folders at work and turn off your laptop and smartphone. Resist the temptation to "check in" by having your partner hide your mobile devices.

Ignore major household chores, unless you find building fences and cleaning the garage relaxing. Clean, pay bills and grocery shop before you start your holiday time so you can dodge these routine tasks.

Sleep in, read books, play with your kids, watch movies, meet friends and try new recipes. Enjoy the outdoors by picnicking, biking or hiking on local trails. Hit up nearby beaches or swimming pools.

Visit museums, shopping centres, science centres, amusement parks, zoos and other attractions. Many tourist attractions have discounts for locals.

Vacation time is meant to help you recharge your batteries and enjoy your surroundings. Do things that are fun and frugal and try not to overbook your schedule. Just relax!

Is this you — or someone you know? Female, over 55, lower income and possibly an immigrant. If so, there's help out there to navigate an increasingly complex financial world.

"The evidence is clear cut — older women are the most disadvantaged group financially, and this alone can lead to more difficulty as they age," says Alexandra Wilson, national project coordinator at the National Initiative for the Care of the Elderly (NICE).

With a tsunami of attention being focused on financial education in schools and credit and debt education for indebted Canadians, older, low-income women have, until now, been largely forgotten.

The NICE project, funded by Status of Women Canada and sponsored by BMO, is rolling out a series of workshops in B.C., Ontario and Quebec aimed at putting financial tools in the hands of this vulnerable group.

The good news is that developing an understanding about money is very empowering. Just learning what programs are out there, such as the Guaranteed Income Supplement for those over 65, can give women a sense of relief about their future. Go to servicecanada.gc.ca and search for Guaranteed Income Supplement.

Each workshop will cover eight topics including developing a financial plan, preventing financial abuse and managing credit and debt.

If you don't live in one of the areas serviced by the workshops you can still access the information and useful tools at nicenet.ca — go to Projects then Older Women and Financial Literacy — the Financial Literacy for Older Adults Toolkit link is on the left-hand side.

Dealing with financial illiteracy at an older age can be one of the hardest things in the world. It's also very worrying for those who have an older, low-income woman as a family member or friend. But the often worry of what may become of her now has an answer.

- The Ontario workshop runs July 26 and 27th in Toronto with another series in the fall at various locations.

Diversify your TFSA

► Your Tax Free Savings Account can help you save for big purchases, trips, kids' education or buying a house

CONTRIBUTED

It's been three years since the Tax Free Savings Account or TFSA was first introduced. And, if you're like most Canadians, you might have a modest amount in a savings account that is perhaps making one or two per cent interest — if you're lucky.

Well, now it's time to shake things up with a little diversification.

Do you know how much contribution room you have?

When the TFSA was first introduced, you were eligible to deposit an annual maximum of $5000. If you made any withdrawals, that amount would be carried forward to the following year. That means that this year you could potentially put away $15,000.

One way to confirm the exact amount is to review your Letter of Assessment that you received from Revenue Canada after filing your taxes.

► Consider using your TFSA to save for retirement.

A great opportunity if you've maxed your RRSPs

If you've successfully reached your RRSP contribution limit, the TFSA is an excellent retirement savings alternative. Remember, your TFSA deposits are tax-free and tax-receipt-free.

In other words, you will not receive a tax receipt for your deposits nor will your withdrawals be taxed like an RRSP. This means more money will stay in your pocket.

No longer just savings accounts

TFSA accounts come in many different formats, which offers you many ways to grow your money. Some people are choosing investment options like stocks, bonds, mutual funds and guaranteed investment funds or GIFs.

Also, you now have the option of borrowing the full $15,000 to invest. Unlike other investment loans, the interest paid on this loan cannot be used as a tax write-off. NEWS CANADA

Nadal, Williams make easy work of first round

► Former champions both win in straight sets ► Murray drops a set, then wins three straight

Rafael Nadal opened his Wimbledon title defence with a convincing victory yesterday, beating Michael Russell 6-4, 6-2, 6-2 on a "fantastic" day while his parents watched from the Royal Box.

In keeping with tradition, the defending men's champion played the first match on Centre Court at the All England Club — and the top-ranked Spaniard put on a worthy performance to begin the 125th edition of the championships.

Five-time women's champion Venus Williams, back on her favourite grass surface, also swept into the second round with a 6-3, 6-1 win over 97th-ranked Akgul Amanmuradova of Uzbekistan.

On a day when rain washed out 31 matches on the outside courts, fourth-seeded Andy Murray also moved into the second round, winning in four sets against Daniel Gimeno-Traver in a match played entirely under the retractable roof over Centre Court.

Nadal, coming off his sixth French Open title and 10th overall Grand Slam championship, double-faulted to go down a break 4-2 in the first set against the 91st-ranked Russell. But Nadal buckled down, ran off six

The rematch

Anyone at Wimbledon a year ago, it seems, remembers bits and pieces of the longest match in tennis history, the 11-hour, five-minute marathon between John Isner and Nicolas Mahut.

- Get ready for the rematch, scheduled to begin today at the All England Club.
- Fittingly, perhaps, Isner-Mahut II might not finish today. That's because theirs is the fourth match on tap for Court 3 — and the forecast calls for rain.
- Court 3 holds 1,980 spectators, about 1,200 more than tiny Court 18, which now bears a plaque noting it was the site of the 2010 original Isner-Mahut.

straight games to take the set and go up a break in the second. He was in command the rest of the way against the 33-year-old American.

"I started so-so in the first set, but after that I start to hit very well the forehand and I think I finished playing a very good level," Nadal said.

Earlier, Canadian Milos Raonic made his Grand Slam grass-court singles debut with a 6-3, 7-6 (3), 6-3 victory over Frenchman Marc Gicquel.
